

with this. Computer systems fail from time to time due to our distractions and forgetfulness.

As you can see, the only way we can ensure that we achieve consistency each and every time is to introduce a computer system that has been spoken to (programmed) for every possible scenario that could potentially arise in performing a repetitious task. Our industry in particular depends on this consistency to ensure a high level of safety and reliability.

